When Should You Get Pest Control for Your Home?

You may want to contact a residential pest-control professional if you notice:

- Repeated pest sightings
- Droppings or other pest evidence
- Gnaw marks
- Nesting material
- Scratching sounds
- Damage to wood or household materials
- Pests appearing in multiple rooms
- Increasing pest activity
- Pest activity returning after DIY treatment

A single pest does not necessarily mean there is an infestation. However, repeated evidence can justify having the situation professionally assessed.

Spiders

Spiders may appear in garages, basements, attics, storage spaces, corners, and other quiet areas.

Identifying and reducing conditions that support insect activity can help with recurring spider problems.

House Crickets

House crickets can enter homes through openings around doors, windows, foundations, and other areas.

Indoor cricket activity can become particularly noticeable because of their chirping.

Mice

Mice can enter homes through relatively small openings and may hide inside walls, attics, garages, cabinets, and other sheltered areas.

Common signs include droppings, gnaw marks, nesting material, and scratching sounds.

Centipedes may enter homes while searching for other insects and are often found in damp areas.

Millipedes

Millipedes are associated with moisture and organic material and can enter homes through openings around the structure.

Termites

- Damaged wood
- Visible termite activity

How Does Home Pest Treatment Work?

Residential pest treatment typically starts with understanding what pest you're dealing with and where the activity is occurring.

1. Inspection

Potential hiding areas, entry points, food sources, moisture, and pest evidence may be assessed.

2. Pest Identification

Correctly identifying the pest helps determine the appropriate management approach.

3. Treatment Plan

The recommended treatment depends on the pest, property, severity of activity, and other conditions.

4. Pest Treatment

Treatment methods vary according to the specific pest and circumstances.

5. Prevention

Potential entry points and conditions that encourage pest activity may be identified.

6. Follow-Up

Some pest problems require monitoring or additional service.

📞 Call (888) 217-8873 to ask about available home pest-control appointments.

Same-Day Home Pest Control

If you need same-day home pest control, contact a residential pest-control provider and ask about current appointment availability.

Same-day service depends on your location, the pest problem, and technician availability.

Emergency Pest Control for Your Home

Some situations may require faster attention, particularly when you discover significant rodent activity, rapidly increasing cockroach activity, or suspected termite damage.

Not every pest problem requires emergency treatment. A professional can help determine the appropriate level of service based on your situation.

📞 Call (888) 217-8873 to discuss an urgent pest problem at your home.

Factors may include:

- Property size
- Severity of activity

- Number of affected areas
- Number of visits

Rather than relying on a generic price, homeowners can contact a local provider to discuss their specific situation.

📞 Call (888) 217-8873 to ask about residential pest-control service and quote options.

How Can I Keep Pests Out of My Home?

Several practical steps can help reduce conditions that attract pests:

- Store food securely.
- Clean spills and crumbs promptly.
- Keep garbage containers closed.
- Fix plumbing leaks.
- Reduce excess moisture.
- Seal appropriate gaps and openings.
- Reduce unnecessary clutter.
- Maintain the home's exterior.
- Inspect stored clothing and materials when appropriate.

These measures can help, but they don't guarantee that pests won't enter a property.
